2014-15

Due to word-of-mouth and a mailshot to Heads, the CCC expanded to 12 teams for 2014-15. It had to change its name to the Cambridgeshire Chess Championship (formerly just 'Cambridge') due to the introduction of King's Ely.

There were significant changes to the structure with all teams meeting at a central venue (with St Faith's and St John's volunteering to cover all events between them) to play simultaneously on Saturdays to solve the issue of excessive after-school travelling. Schools could then play more than one match at each event. Each school played every other school only once due to the increased number of teams and lack of necessity for home and away fixtures. Also, schools fielded teams of six instead of five to increase the amount of chess played.

Jamie Mitchell of St Faith's was unanimously voted as Chairperson by other members as he had been responsible for the championship's organisation, inviting new teams, setting fixtures, building and maintaining the website, managing the budget, and calling and chairing meetings.

Towards the end of the season, the CCC secured sponsorship from Arcus Global, a company run by a parent of one of the children on the St John's team. The money was used to pay for equipment such as boards, pieces and clocks, T-shirts for adjudicators, hosting for the website, and medals for all players in the top three teams.

The league was settled on the final day when King's Cambridge avenged the previous season by beating former champions Perse Prep. At the same time, St Paul's prevented the leaders throughout, Milton Road, from securing enough points to win the championship.
